The efficacy of chloroquine in the treatment of mice experimentally infected with Leishmania donovani has been examined and compared with sodium stibogluconate. Chloroquine was found to be more effective than the conventional antimonials at the same dose in the initial treatment of mice infected with a LD50 dose of Leishmania donovani. However, at the same dose, chloroquine was no more effective in the follow-up of therapy and was less effective than sodium stibogluconate when the parasite load of the infected liver was high. On the other hand, sodium stibogluconate was found to be less effective when the mice had developed a Th1-type response to the parasite. Sodium stibogluconate was not able to cure mice chronically infected with 10 LD50 doses of Leishmania donovani over a period of two months, while chloroquine was able to do so. The recovery was not due to the permanent elimination of the parasites but rather to an absence of any clinical symptoms or residual parasites. In mice chronically infected with LD50 doses of Leishmania donovani over a period of two years, sodium stibogluconate was able to lower the parasite load of the spleen but not of the liver. Chloroquine failed to cure any of the animals over this period.Q: How to use maximum date of each row in SQL Server I have this table: ID COLOR DATE 1 A 2018/01/02 1 A 2018/01/05 1 A 2018/01/06 1 A 2018/01/07 2 B 2018/01/05 2 B
